Less Drinking and More Smoking Shown in Revenue

Reports.

Less beer and whisky was consumed in the United States in 1912 than in 1911. Beer consumption fell off a great deal. This decrease in the consumption of intoxicants is shown in the preliminary annual report of Royal E. Cabell, commissioner of internal revenue.

While the falling off in the total amount of liquors consumed is marked, it is not as great as the falling off in the precapita consumption.

the per capita consumption. Cigarette smoking made a remarkable jump forward in the past year, however, the American people using 2,000,000,000 more than in any previous year, and running the total well up over the eleven billion mark.

The country has nearly 264,000,000 galance of which years and was the country has nearly 264,000,000 galance.

The country has nearly 264,000,000 gallons of whisky stored in warehouses throughout the country. While the consumption fell off last year, the production exceeded any previous mark, leaving the greatest amount on record in bond. Kentucky alone has 188,000,000 gallons stored in warehouses, which exceeds the total amount of whisky and rum in the United States eleven years ago.

Girl's Sister Accuses Sinclair of Betrayal.

Although the coroner's jury at Occoquan found that the child born to Miss Edna Allen came to its death in a bus of the District of Columbia was held manner unknown, Leith Sinciair, of yesterday afternoon at Marshall Hall. Washington and Occoquan, was imme- More than 5,000 persons made the trip, diately rearrested on a new warrant including about 500 boys and girls from of Miss Edna Allen, and is held under $1,000 bond to appear before Justice of the Peace E. Z. Sanbourn, Septem-The new warrant charges betrayal. The jury exonerated him of the charge of malpractice.

This new warrant was sworn out be fore the coroner's jury had completed its deliberations and was retained during the afternoon by the commonwealth attorney of Prince William county, Thomas H. Lion, who did not expect, he said, a verdict against Sinclair by the coroner's jury. As soon as that body reported the warrant was served. Girl Tells Her Story.

Gathered in a little upstairs bedroor in the Allen home in Occoquan the coroner and the jury had heard Edna Alen tell of her acquaintance with Sinclair. She was too weak, her physician said, to leave the house and go to the little Occoquan schoolhouse where the inquest was conducted and the jurymen were taken to her instead. The jurors first heard the sister narrate what she knew of the intimacy between Edna Allen and Leith Sinclair and then crowded up the staalrwy to the second floor of the dwelling and stood in a semicircle round the easy chair for which Miss Allen had left her bed a short time before.

The girl in the case charged Sinclair with being responsible for her trouble, and declared that he had several different times given her medicine. Concerning the nature and effect of this medicine there is dispute among the physicians who heard the testimony. A certified copy of a prescription sent Miss Allen by Sinclair, according to her testimony, while she was a guest of relatives at Hayre de Grace, was offered in evidence.

Bore Baby While Alone.

"Dr. Sinclair came to see me on the morning that the baby was born," said the girl in a faint voice. 'It was about 7:30 o'clock. After he came I can't remember much what happened for hours. The next I knew Dr. Starkweather was here."

Dr. Starkweather, according to all the testimony on the case, was called in by the sister, Carrie Allen, Returning to the Allen home in Occoquan from Washington on the noon train, she found her sister in danger of dying from anemia. The baby had been born with no one in the home.

Sinclair called to the stand swore Sinclair called to the stand swore that he had not known of Miss Allen's condition. He defied prescribing anything for her save a harmless tonic. This was the testimony he gave at the first session of the inquest, and it was repeated yesterday because of the presence of a new member of the jury, the absent man, Arthur Ferguson, being ill in a hospital in Washington, the absent man, Arthur Ferguso being ill in a hospital in Washington.

Sister Tells of Threat.

When Edna Allen had finished her story and Judge C. E. Nicol, of Alexandria, one of the attorneys for Sinclair, had asked one question, came the most dramatic moment of the inquest. Judge Nicol had said:

"You say, Miss Allen, that Dr. Sinclair is the only man in the case?" "He is," replied the shrinking figure in the easy chair.

"May I say something more," asked Carrie Allen, the sister who had finish-ed her testimony downstairs previously.

ed her testimony downstairs previously. Permission was given.

"I should like to tell the jury," began the sister in a voice which quivered with emotion, "that on the Monday night following the birth of the baby, and the swearing out of the warrant by me. Sinclair came to this house and asked to see me. He then told me that if I did not withdraw the warrant, but persisted in going ahead, he would blacken my sister's character."

Three Manassas physicians were called to the stand by the defense. These three, Drs. W. A. Newman, W. F. Merchant, and J. M. Lewis, swore that they had made a careful examination of the dead baby, that it had been born had made a careful examination of the dead baby, that it had been born naturally in their opinion, and that its death came because the mother was alone when it was born.

Assisting Judge Nicol in the defense was C. A. Sinclair, of Manassas. The members of the jury were Ellis Davis, Hezekiah Reed, Giles Cartér, L. T. Carter, R. Slacman, and John Tanner.
